The Mystery Surrounding the Murder of Phoebe Paulin.

Detectives Hard at Work—No Clear Leading Toward the Discovery of the Murderer—Where and by Whom the Girl Was Last Seen—A Tall Man.

By Telegram to the Post-Dispatch. ST. LOUIS, N. D., November 28.—It is reported here that a woman has recognized the bloody shirt found near Phoebe Paulin was murdered as belonging to her son, who has been missing from home since Saturday morning last. Public Prosecutor Keene has officially notified Gov. Lodiow of the tragedy, and suggests a stated reward for the arrest of the murderer. Marshal McClesney and the detectives thought that they had a clew to the murderer. Nicholas Murphy's young son reported that he and two other boys had seen two shirts in a sand pit near Dodd-town, one mile east of the base of the mountains. Officer C. E. Eberberg found a white woolen undershirt and a blue and white striped shirt in the sand pit, and there were red stains on both shirts, which had evidently been respectable married man, Frank Hardy of Orange saw a tall and short man following a woman up the Eagle Rock road at 6 o'clock on Saturday evening. His story corroborates the other reports about two men being seen on the road to the stone crusher. The post-mortem showed that Phoebe had been assaulted, but it also proved that she was pure previously. This evening it was reported that a young man living near Wacker's station, on the mountain summit, had been seen with Phoebe at night, but the detectives did not put much faith in the story. They admit that they have no clew that promises any solution of the mystery, and they fear that the murderer will never be discovered. Last evening the West Orange township committee met and voted a reward of $1,000 for the arrest and conviction of the murderer, and citizens subscribed $800 more. They also appointed a committee

TO SOLICIT MORE MONEY and employ additional detectives. A number of prominent and wealthy citizens took part. "I am satisfied," said Officer Eberberg last evening, "that the murderer turned down the mountain and took off the bloody shirt at the sand pit, and that he is not a stranger here." Constable Murray declares that no woman is safe on the mountain roads after nightfall. He knew rich ladies who had been insulted by negroes and tramps, and he had been appointed specially to effect the capture of the ruffians.

HIS LORDSHIP'S DOG.

How an Imported Pup Got Badly Whipped—"Nellie" Did It.

By Telegram to the Post-Dispatch. NEW YORK, November 28.—A dog fight, witnessed by forty men, all of whom were well dressed and some even stylishly attired, took place early yesterday morning at a well known Long Island resort. One of the dogs was the property of an English nobleman, who recently arrived in this country, and who brought with him five dogs, three greyhounds and two bull-terriers. Soon after he arrived here he boasted of the superiority of his dogs and claimed that either of his bull-terriers could "lick any blasted dog in America, yer know." One of his dandy friends, who knew a dog fancier, sought the latter's advice, and that worthy said: "Hill's blooming lordship 'll make a match with your dog, 'f he's a 'tall 'un'." Then the mutual friendliness arose for his lordship, who agreed to match his "yeller dog" against the "tall 'un" for 200 sovs.

His friend replied that he would make a match for a friend of his, and $100 a side was posted. A well-known resort on Long Island was named as the place of fighting. When the dogs were pitted about 2:30 a. m., the crowd present became greatly excited and bet their money freely. His lordship's dog, a black and white bitch named Nellie, weighed 31 pounds. The handlers of the dogs and the referees were men well known in connection with dog and cock fights. After the dogs had been weighed—the "tall 'un" weighed 31 pounds and the usually disgusting preliminary of tasting the animals to discover poison, the dogs were handed for the first scratch.

When time was called they were loosed and the dogs were off. The "tall 'un" was in the middle of the pit. Nellie secured a throat hold on Teddy and tore at his wind-pipe as he crashed—the "tall 'un" for a friend of his, and $100 a side was posted. BUILDING A NATION.

Mr. Murray, Utah's Governor, on the Mormon Question.

Does Not Believe in Crushing Polygamy Out by Force—Present Laws Touching the Mormon Subject Inadequate—A Suggestion of Two Worthy of Note.

By Telegram to the Post-Dispatch.

NEW YORK, November 28.—Gov. Eli H. Murray of Utah was sent there nearly three years ago by the President. He is on an official visit East to report to the Secretary of the Interior all he has seen in that section of the land. Yesterday he was encountered in this city and asked to give the results of his observations and experience. In the course of the interview he said: "The Mormon Church of late years has concealed the amount of money it collects. They are extremely and wisely reticent about their monetary affairs, and there is no avenue open to me or to the general Government leading to a justifiable investigation thereof, so that we really know nothing about it. It is obvious, however, and a sensible inference, that it is not a patent that with the growth of the Mormon population, the expansion of its scope and the increasing vigor of its existence, the amount of its revenues must proportionately increase. I cannot say that Mormons have no respect for any law. But in this matter affecting

THEIR PECUNIARY STANDING.

They seem to dread any publicity.

"Who is the chief apostle now?" "John Taylor, an Englishman or Scotchman. He is an elderly person, in the neighborhood of 70 years of age, of rather feeble presence, a shrewd, calculating person, of his station, where his 'ruffians' were bandaged by the ambulance surgeon, and he went home. His horse was uninjured, but a horse attached to a group belonging to Mr. Hastings, of No. 367 West Thirty-ninth street, stepped on the electric wire as it lay in the middle of the street, and was so severely injured by the shock that it

HAD TO BE KILLED. A few moments later a couple belonging to Messrs. Overin & Hastings, of No. 2 East Thirty-ninth street, dashed down the avenue. The driver, James Conroy, and the horse became entangled in the dangling wire and received fatal shocks. Conroy was momentarily stunned, but recovered sufficiently to lead the horse back to the stable. He is still suffering from prostration, and the animal has not yet recovered from the shock. The horse will probably be shot. Several coaches and a private watchman for Mrs. A. T. Stewart corroborated this fact. At the Thirtieth Street Police Station it was said that one man and one horse had been injured, and that the latter had been shot. The Sergeant said that he had heard that

THE LIGHTS WERE ON. but thought it was only for a few minutes. None of the policemen had reported anything about it. At about 11 o'clock workmen of the Cable Company got the pole in order by raising a ladder where the wire had been and stretching the wire over one of the rungs. The ladder saw a pole all through the night, and yesterday morning a new pole was erected.

A High-Standing Divorce Suit.

By Telegram to the Post-Dispatch.

NEW YORK, November 28.—A divorce case in which the plaintiff sues her husband, a son of Mr. D. B. Allen, who married the late Commodore Vanderbilt's sister, will claim the attention of the general term of the Supreme Court in January. The papers have been filed with Judge Donohue, but he refuses to make their contents public. He says that the complaint contains a number of allegations unfit for publication, and that the defendant is placed in a most unenviable light. The complaint has already been served, but decisive action was delayed in the hope that an equitable settlement might be made. Failing in that, the plaintiff began proceedings against her husband. Counsel for the plaintiff and defendant refused to say anything about the suit.

The Marriage at Philadelphia of Banker Drexel's Daughter.

By Telegram to the Post-Dispatch.

PHILADELPHIA, Pa., November 28.—Miss May Drexel, the only surviving daughter of Mr. A. J. Drexel, the banker, was married at noon today to Mr. Charles Stewart, son of Mr. T. McIntosh Stewart. The ceremony was performed in the home of the bride's father, in West Philadelphia, by the Rev. Dr. Martin, rector of St. James' Episcopal Church. Owing to the still recent death of Mrs. Edward Biddle, Mr. Drexel's oldest daughter, the wedding invitations were confined to relatives and very intimate friends.

Among the latter were Gen. Grant and W. Childs. Miss Drexel was attended by six bridesmaids, Miss Stewart, sister of the groom, Miss Ida Morrell, Miss Coleman, Miss May Peterson, Miss Emily Biddle, and Miss Julia Biddle. The presents made a magnificent display, and included several valuable gifts from friends abroad. The newly married couple left early in the afternoon for their wedding tour. They contemplated an extended trip to Europe at an early date.

MURDERED THE GIRL. A woman at Mr. Paulin's said that Mrs. Houston, who lived in "the Eyrie," saw two men walking fast after the girl passed that house, but to the Post-Dispatch correspondent Mrs. Houston denied that she saw the girl and the men. George Van Riper, a farm hand, said he was told that the girl went to walk up the mountain with a man to whom she was engaged. This informant, when questioned, could not say who the man was. Mrs. Fisher, a sister of Phoebe, said: "One day, at Isaac Meyers' gate, a man spoke to Phoebe, who walked off with him, and they sat on a rock where they talked earnestly. She met him there several times. He was young and well dressed. She appeared to expect him, but she never spoke to me or her parents about him. He never came to the house after her. People say she was a sister of Phoebe."

PHOEBE AND THE YOUNG MAN walk together. I do not think they were engaged.

Beside the body of the murdered girl a piece of a postal card was found. It was dated Orange, but the name is indistinct. A thirty foot away the blade of an old table knife was seen. It had blood stains upon it. Jim O'Connell, a blacksmith, said that a pair of gray stockings tipped with white in the bushes. It is thought the stockings may have been used to gag the girl. Dave Pilgrimage, the ticket agent at the Watnagan Railroad Depot, proved that he was in his office when the murder took place. He is a
